

NO VACANT CHAIR THANKSGIVING TABLE

WRITE SOME ONE TO TAKE PLACE OF BOY IN FRANCE.

U. S. Food Administration Offers Economical Menus.

Keep Up Tradition.
The Thanksgiving dinner is too precious a tradition to be given up now, even though this year families are separated as never before, and food is so precious that housewives plan the Thanksgiving menu with the utmost care in order that there shall be no left-overs to be thrown away and no foods unnecessarily taken from the stores that should be going to feed the hungry millions in Europe.

But if our Thanksgiving dinner this year is going to be a happy one, and assuredly the people have had a more just cause for a happy Thanksgiving dinner — we must have no vacant chairs at the table. To those who are to whom the Thanksgiving dinner is a duty, and to those who are to whom it is a pleasure, the U. S. Food Administration has decided that they would better not "come up" for the customary Thanksgiving feast in order to give their trip would cost to the red cross.

But even so, the inevitable gloom that a lonely Thanksgiving dinner brings can be averted by inviting some one else who otherwise might be alone on that day. Perhaps you know of some girl war worker or a boy in uniform who is a stranger in the city. Why not ask them to be your Thanksgiving guests? Or why not go to the Home Service bureau of the Red Cross and ask them for the name of some soldier's wife who is struggling to keep her little family together and make both ends meet until her husband returns. The Red Cross Home Service knows of many such cases where an invitation would not only cheer the heart, but put new life into over-worked and underpaid bodies.

Go with these opportunities to make a full table, you can go ahead and plan your Thanksgiving dinner as if it were going to be the old-time family gathering.

Now as to the dinner itself, it may be either with or without turkey and conform to food administration requirements. But if you do have turkey, order one that weighs at least eight pounds, as turkeys below this weight are too young to be killed without a loss of meat.

The rest of the menu should be built entirely around home-grown and home-canned and dried products in order not to draw on the national storehouses for food. The following menus from the U. S. food administration are suggested in this mind:

WITH TURKEY.
Roast Turkey
Dressings (home-canned) or Creamed Onions
Mashed Potatoes
Lettuce Salad with Russian Dressing
Prune Whip
Coffin
Local Nuts
Local Fruits
WITHOUT TURKEY.
Corn Chowder
Oleary
Chest Chicken with Stuffing and Rabbit
Dressed Turnips or Mashed Squash
Apples
Pumpkin Pie
Coffee

Y. M. C. A. SENDS OUT CALL

Men Needed to Assist Occupation Army in France.

The Y. M. C. A. war service is still leading in providing this training and entertainment who are needed now.

Such men will render a patriotic service that is in a class with that of the army. There is no more patriotic task than caring for the boys we have sent abroad. The workers will be well cared for themselves, and they will be assured of at least a year's employment.

Reasonable allowances will be made for the support of wives, children or dependent parents whom they may leave behind them.

The recruiting office at 610 James building, invites the applications of men of good character and with the capacity to lead in this work.

Such men, in addition to rendering a patriotic and unselfish service, will enjoy an advantage that will never come again. They will see these European countries under the stress

Crisp Linen for Indoors

(By Betty Brown.)
Every wife knows that friend husband thinks she's "dressed up" when she sometimes exchanges a summer gown for the dark wools and silks of winter. Here's an exceptionally charming house gown of blue and white striped linen, with big blue buttons and white voile cuffs and collar with touches of blue embroidery. A cunning hat of the same linen with its brim faced with blue velvet accompanies the frock when its owner wears it to market under her cover-all coat.

of war conditions; and with the marks of war still fresh upon them. They will learn and understand the history of the great conflict as few will know and understand it. They will win the gratitude of the boys abroad and of their countrymen at home.

Men from all over the Chattanooga district are wanted. Applications by mail addressed to the recruiting office at 610 James building will receive prompt and courteous attention, and it is hoped that public interest and patriotic sacrifice will not fail at a time when both are needed.

"My Dear Friends—Nearly a year has elapsed since it was my pleasure to send you my letter of greeting. The intervening months have been full of many varied experiences for each one of us.
"Many of us have left the homeland and are overseas, doing our part to hasten the return to sanity and peace to the world.
"At the time I write this I thank God that after nearly four and a half years of cruel war, a victorious peace seems to be in sight, and when that is accomplished there will remain the tremendous work of reconstruction. Reconstruction of men, spiritually and physically, and reconstruction of material things, and I know our beloved America will be in the forefront in this work.
"We have had but little time for deep thought for burning, flashing impressions. We have been in the open taking 'snap shots' rapidly at every opportunity. I may tell you, I trust you will have an opportunity to attend some Christian service on Christmas day, even if it cannot be in one of our own churches, so that our united prayers and thanksgivings may ascend together to the throne of grace.
"May your Christmas be a holy, happy season and the New Year filled with all good things for you and all your loved ones and may the Lord bless and keep us; may the Lord make His face to shine upon us and give us peace."
"Affectionately and truly,
"W. J. LORING CLARK."

TELLTALE OVERCOAT

Found on Bridge Leaves Impression That Gwinn Had a Life.

Knoxville, Nov. 27.—Declaring that the body of the man who had gone down, but that he had gone above, a note was found in the pocket of a coat discarded on the Tennessee river bridge recently. The note bore the name of a man who has resided north of this city for several months, and who is believed by some people to have been Dr. Richard Ricketts, or whose inquiries have been made by relatives in Detroit.

This man, who has been passing under another name than Dr. Ricketts, has been engaged in making and selling a number of patent medicines. His products were sold in the rural sections of East Tennessee, a small automobile being used by the physician in making his deliveries.

Suspecting what he was the Dr. Ricketts of Hammond, Ill., who is reported to have spent large sums of money in search for his daughter, detectives called at his home to inform him that his daughter had died in Detroit last month. When seen by the officers he remarked that he would be back in a few minutes. He waited for almost an hour and he did not return. The coat, with the note previously referred to, was found on the river bridge here a short time later.

Labels of the medicine made by this physician were also found in the pockets. It is stated. Although circumstances point to a suicide, authorities do not give much weight to the theory. Considerable mystery surrounds the case. If the man is Dr. Ricketts, the officers cannot understand why he disappeared so suddenly. If he is not Dr. Ricketts, then his actions are all the more unexplainable.

TAPS FOR VETERAN

How A. H. Pettibone, For Years Prominent in Politics of State, Dies in Nashville.

Nashville, Nov. 27.—Major A. H. Pettibone, a veteran of the Union army, and a notable figure in East Tennessee politics forty years ago, died here last night at the age of 84. He served three terms in congress from the first Tennessee district.

Maj. Pettibone's political career occurred in the late seventies and early eighties, when he was a very prominent figure in republican politics. He and the late Senator Bob Taylor had the distinction of each beating and being beaten by the other for congress. Afterward, they became warm personal friends. If indeed they were not at the time, Maj. Pettibone, following his retirement from politics, imitated his former rival by entering the lecture field. Perhaps the most noteworthy of his efforts was entitled, "If a man die, shall he live again?"

For a good long period in his later years, Maj. Pettibone was connected with the government department of animal industry, with headquarters at Nashville.
